

Adhesion

2023, Dale Walton, <https://boardgamegeek.com/thread/2757623/>

The first player places a stone, after which the players alternate turns, taking up to two moves per turn.

A move can be either:

1. Add a stone to an empty space that is out-of-sight of any opponent's stone.
2. Slide a stone along a straight line to a new position, such that: the new location for the sliding stone has a greater number of opponent's stones adjacent to it than before.

Game ends when one player cannot take a turn, or when neither player can slide on their turn.

Goal. The player with more territory wins the game.

- Territory for each player is their stone count plus the number of their possible placements.
- In case of a tie, the first player wins