

Tiao

2026, Andreas Edmeier, <https://playtiao.com>

Tiao (跳, Chinese for "jump") is a two-player strategy game where you capture pieces by jumping over them. It's played on a 19×19 goban.

Rules

- On his turn, the player either
 - drops a friendly stone on an empty cell or
 - selects a friendly piece and use it to jump over an orthogonal adjacent opponent piece, capturing it. After the jump, the player can continue jumping with that stone. Each capture earns one point.
- You can't place on the edge unless an enemy can jump there (so, edge placements have always a defensive reason).
- A connected group of same-color stones can't grow past ten stones.
 - However, connecting two smaller clusters into one bigger than ten is allowed! The rule only blocks adding to a cluster that's already at maximum size.
 - Also, a group can grow if a friendly piece stops jumping nearby.
- The player that scores ten points first wins the game.

The selected white stone can capture one of two black stones